Three Little Pigs

- Replace deleted phrases using Phrasal Verbs. The answers are below:

Once upon a time there were three little pigs who lived in a little house. Their mother ~~educated them~~ as well as she could, but they didn't ~~have a good relationship~~. They fought and argued, and their mother was tired of ~~reprimanding them~~. So when they ~~were older~~ she ~~told them to leave~~.

Each of them decided to ~~establish themselves~~ in a different place. The oldest pig was lazy, and decided to build a house made of straw.

One day, when the pig was ~~doing nothing~~, a wolf suddenly ~~appeared~~, and the little pig ~~got up very quickly~~ and ~~entered the house running~~ into the house.

~~“Leave the house!~~,” said the wolf, “or I will ~~demolish your house by blowing at it!~~”

But the pig ~~left through the window~~ and ~~escaped~~.

The wolf was very clever. He sat down to think and ~~discovered by his own effort~~ that the pig had gone to his brother’s house, so he ~~started his journey~~.

When he got to the second pig’s house, they had ~~closed all the doors and windows with a key~~. But the house was made of wood, so the wolf ~~took a deep breath~~ and ~~demolished the house by blowing at it~~.

Fortunately, the little pigs ~~left running~~ to their youngest brother’s house. He ~~allowed them to enter~~ and ~~closed everything with a key~~.

The wolf tried to ~~demolish the house by blowing~~ but couldn’t, because it was made of bricks. But he ~~didn’t surrender/stop trying~~, and decided to ~~go~~ onto the roof and ~~place himself~~ the chimney.

But the three little pigs ~~completed~~ a plan, and lit a fire in the fireplace, so the wolf burnt himself. He didn’t ~~die~~, but ~~left the chimney very quickly~~, ~~left the roof with a jump~~ and ~~escaped~~.

He never ~~returned~~, and the pigs lived happily ever after. From then on, they ~~had a good relationship~~ and ~~continued to live~~ together.

- Solution:

Once upon a time there were three little pigs who lived in a little house. Their mother brought them up as well as she could, but they didn't get on. They fought and argued, and their mother was tired of telling them off. So when they grew up she kicked/threw them out.

Each of them decided to settle down in a different place. The oldest pig was lazy, and decided to build a house made of straw.

One day, when the pig was sitting around, a wolf suddenly turned up, and the little pig shot up/jumped up and hurried/ran/shot into the house.

"Come out!", said the wolf, "or I will blow your house down!"

But the pig got/jumped out of the window and got/ran away.

The wolf was very clever. He sat down to think and worked out that the pig had gone to his brother's house, so he set off.

When he got to the second pig's house, they had locked themselves in. But the house was made of wood, so the wolf breathed in and blew the house down.

Fortunately, the little pigs ran away to their youngest brother's house. He let them in and locked up.

The wolf tried to blow the house down but couldn't, because it was made of bricks. But he give up, and decided to ~~go~~ climb up onto the roof and get into the chimney.

But the three little pigs carried out a plan, and lit a fire in the fireplace, so the wolf burnt himself. He didn't pass away, but shot/jumped out of the chimney, jumped off the roof and ran away.

He never came back, and the pigs lived happily ever after. From then on, they got on and carried on living together.
